NHDOT WORKER REMEMBERED ON NATIONAL WORK ZONE MEMORIAL NEW MOVING WALL TO BE UNVEILED AS PART OF WORK ZONE AWARENESS WEEK

Daniel Carswell was working as part of a mowing crew when he was struck and killed in the median of the Everett Turnpike near Exit 5 in Nashua on September 23, 1997. The 33-year old New Hampshire Department of Transportation Highway Maintainer left behind his wife, Cheryl, and daughter, Nicole.

Danny Carswell's name is one of more than 700 names that appear on the new "National Work Zone Memorial" that will be unveiled in ceremonies on April 9 in Capitol Heights, Maryland.

Sponsored by the American Traffic Safety Services Association, the National Work Zone Memorial aims to promote work zone safety to the public by remembering highway workers, members of law enforcement, public safety, motorists, passengers and pedestrians who have lost their lives in highway work zones. After the moving wall memorial is unveiled by a Congressional member of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, it will begin a cross country tour.

An average of 768 people have died in highway work zones in each of the past five years, and 40,000 are injured annually. April 8-12 is National Work Zone Awareness Week.
